Republican State Convention.

The Republican State Convention to select Delegates to the National Republican Conthe nomination of a candidate for the Chief Justiceship of our Supreme Court; and to perfect measures for the thorough organization of the Republican party in Wisconsin for the coming Presidential campaign, is to assemble at Madison, at noon to-morrow. We hope to see all parts of our State fully repre-5 of the deliberations of the Convention may be so conducted as to ensure the signal triumph of the Republican cause and candidates in the great contest now so rapidly approaching.

Chief Justice Dixon.

A friend at Portage, whose veracity will not be questioned by any man who knows him, assures us that the statement made a few days since, by a correspondent of the Sentinet, that Judge Dixon was a Know-Nothing, is wholly without foundation. We can well believe it. Judge Dixox is a man of too liberal and enlarged views to connect himself with any such proscriptive organicalled upon, as a citizen of Portage, to contradict it. I have lived here ever since the Spring of 1854, and have been well acquainted with Mr. Dixon, and have known something of what was going on in town, and I know that the statements of your anonymons correspondent are substantially false. Judge Dixon is pre-eminently a liberal-minded man and utterly devoid of the narrow spirit attributed to him. He has always mingled freely and familiarly with all classes of people, without regard to nationality. Prob. ably no man here has enjoyed the personal friendship and respect of our foreign-born offizens to a greater extent than he has .-They have never suspected him of being Know-Nothing. His acts and conversations have never given any indication of it. How does it happen that the discovery is but just made ?

So far as I could ever ascertain, there never was a Know-Nothing Lodge here, nor a Know-Nothing party, nor a Know-Nothing. Occasionally, some such mar as your correspondent, has raised the cry of Knew-Nothingism on some man he wished to injure, but nothing more definite than that has ever been

Your correspondent says there was a diffculty, amounting to a riot, at the election in from that. On this, as on all the rest, he is first place instead of his own (?) we can not say they never heard anything of it before,-Mr. Dixon was a candidate for District Attorney at that election, and there were foreigners on the ticket with him, and he used as much exertion for their election as for his vention which meets in Chicago in June own. Does that look as if he was "opposed n-xt; to take counsel together in regard to to foreigners holding offices of trustor profit." Mr. Dixon has taken but little part in politics, but that little has been of quite a different character from that indicated by your correspondent. H. W. TENNEY.

This great national work is now being brought into operation, and will doubtless be accomplished with more success, as its prosecution will be attended with greater energy and rapidity, on account of the better experience in its management. In 1850 the plan was adopted, and the seventh cenaus was an experiment, the conduct of which demanded caution. The comparative success of that work has inspired a degree of confidence which will insure the vigorous execution of the eighth eensus, and the early embodiment of the results in a menner gratifying to the country and of interest to the world at large.

The first duty of the Census Office, after the receipt of the returns, will consist in making the Congressional apportionment of members of the House of Representatives among the several States, according to their representative population.

The effect of this wise and salutary provision will be to reduce the present number of members, which has grown by the admission of new States, to the number provided by the law of May 23, 1850, viz: 283; and,

Sen-ator Green, of Mo, reported resolutions, seven in number, embodying the principles of those introduced in the Senate by Senator Davis, of Miss. Quite a debate took place. The Senators friendly to Douglas were opposed to adopting any resolutions whatever, as they might be considered the platform for the new party. It was disjustly according the friends.

Should friends are not willing to abide the decision we comply with the invitation of "Southern of the convention, in God's name let them D-mocrat," we fear that the reception of the gratify their spheen by bolting the nomina-Dot GLAS delegates from this State, at Charleston, would be anything but hospitable. All of them, we believe, have been more or less tripted with Free Soilism and some of them were active members of the Free Soil party in 13-18. The "Abolition resolutions" adopt. d by the Convention which put Gov. BARgrow in nomination, as well as those passed by the Democratic Legislature, when they undertook to instruct Senator WALKER, would be quite as obnoxious to the South, as anything to be found in the Republican creed. But if we should forward these resolutions and the names of the delegates who supported them, to Charleston, the Southern Confedcracy would discover that the John Browns had all changed their names to John Smiths, and were quite ready to swear that they never had had anything to do with these incondiary resolves.

For the Scutinei. Ma. Editor: -In your paper of the 22nd inst , is a communication signed "German Reinst, is a communication signed "German Republican," who not only assumes to speak for the whole German Republicans of the State, but also to read the American Repub-State, but also to read the American Repulsion Governor, Onvernor, Onvernor, for Secretary of State, Jonathan S. Harvey; for Auditor of State, Albert Lange; for Attorney General, out attempting to comment upon the good taste of the writer, or to disturb the modest Court, Benjamin Karrison; for Clerk of Supreme Court, John P. Jones; for Superius appearance which it exhibits, we must be appearance which it exhibits. permitted to question the soundness of his Fletcher. judgment, as well as the accuracy of his statements. It is barely possible that there may be interested aspirants, and contriving politicians among the German as well as among the American Republicans; and we are by no means willing to admit that the standard of political or social morality is higher among the former than the latter. Nor isit quite in harmony with good taste, for a few German Republicans, at every approaching election to threaten the party that if such, or such a candidate is nominated, they will bolt the ticket. This game has been played once or twice, perhaps more times before, with success. But it is time now to put an end to this "badgering," distating, domineering course. If the German Republicans are attached to the party from principles, and honestly desire the ascendancy of those principles, they will conform to those usages of the party which alone can secure it. They ought not to endeavor to dictate its nominees, or infinence them any further than their representation in the convention enables them .-Do they suppose, that because a half dozen of their would-be leaders are hostile to a particular individual, they will be permitted to ostracise him at their pleasure, crush him forever under their heel? Must all the rest of the party stand quietly by and witness the sac rifice, not once but twice, nay at all times, in order to escape the threatened vengeance of a few who threaten to bolt ? Let "German Republican" be assured that se will find himself mistaken. If he and his rior virtue and purity may answer very well on a small scale, but we do not believe it will

Republican party, either Germans or Amerioans. We are very willing to consult and labor with our German Republicans, but we will neither undertake to threaten or dictate to them, nor permit them to do the same to us. In regard to the approaching election, it seems that ''German Republican'' undertakes to answer not only for his own countrymen, but also for all of the adopted citizens of this State, and to combine them in hostile array against any one "tainted" with corruption bonds. It would have been more satisfactory if he had condescended to give us his name in order that we might know who it is among us possessed of such vast information; who is this searcher of hearts and tryer of the reins of all the adopted citizens. But what is it to be "tainted" with corruption bonds? One would naturally suppose it meant one who had corruptly received and used bonds, for an immoral purpose, or as an inducement or reward to do some act. "German Republican" does not say that Judge Smirn ever used any bonds for any the SENTINEL any such "notice" as the News | such purpose. But in a manner utterly in-

Is there a man in the State who believes that he was ever influenced in the slightest degree by any thing of the kind? No man has even dared to point to a time, place or occasion when he has shrunk from the performance of his full duty. Even "German Republican" himself does not pretend it. On the contrary his bitterest enemies (and they are those who hate him for his decision in the BOOTH and RYORAFT cases,) all admit that during the six years he was on the Bench, he did his whole duly with fidelity.

But "German Republican" says there was but one way to dispose of the bonds left at his house, and that was to send them back immediately. That may have been a good outste notes on the following banks. They construct the state of the s way, perhaps a better way, but that it was a better way admits of a doubt. They might have been thrown in the fire. They might have been placed in the hands of a third perthroughout the rural districts. Here are a son until time should reveal the object and intent in the matter. Probably if Judge Smith had known, as well as Bynon Paine, who was Chief Clerk of the Senate, the purpose of issuing those bonds, he would have done as he did. But he swears in his testimony that he never had heard or thought of any bonds being issued to members of the Legislature or others until a very long time afterwards. The fact is he never recoived them for his own use, and it is, or ought to. be well known, that the bonds have for more than three years been placed at the order of the Company; that the Attorney of the Company was so notified a long time ago, and previous to the investigation.

The fact is, this humbug of corruption bonds in regard to Judge SMITH has had its day. There never were five men in the State who believed he did anything wrong in the matter. They only say he might have taken a wiser course. Some think so, others think he pursued the wisest course under the circumstances. But his enemies have made what they can out of the matter, and it is now time to stop. If he had been a member to cofficer of the Legislature, or the land grant thad been before the Court, or the Company that we had been before the Court, or the Company to the company that we whole craft in a promise tous heap of hull and rigging. FARM FENCES.—Eleven years ago the coming spring, I made a post and rail fence which I consider the best wooden one I have ever known; and believing it of sufficient importance to the farmer, and for his benefit, I will give the plan of its construction:

The rails should be split out of large white or burr oak timber, seven feet long, of good size, and as nearly square as possible. I have sometimes used round posts of suitable size—say from eight to ten inches in diameters the back walnut or locust. Sat ter-of oak, black walnut or locust. Set the posts ten feet apart, from centre to centre, two and a hall feet in the ground. In centre, two and that respects the mould around the post at the surface. After the posts are well set, and in line, hew off any rough places. Most of the posts that are split require very little if any hewing, don-sequently it is less trouble and expense to do it ofter they are set.

The rails or bars are to be split from large

The rails or bars are to be split from large oak logs, eleven feet long. The logs should be sawed so that the rails may be one length, The rails should be about two and a half noches thick, and of good width, say from live to ten inches. To prepare the rails, I place two solid blocks of good size, four to six feet long, about ten feet apart; then one man holds the rails on the blocks, while another hews them. Hew the splice about one foot, one side straight and the opposite bewied. The straight side on the forward and of the rail goes next the post; on the bevuled. The straight side on the forward end of the rail goes next the post; on the other end it is the opposite, so that the two bevoked sides come togother when placed on the posts. Then take two pieces of scantling, two by four inches wide, five to six feet long, and bore with one and one-fourth inch augur—say five holes in each, the distance you wish your rails apart, and drive pans in them about eight inches long; place these worlght heade the two first posts, where you begin to build your fence. Then lay on these pins your first pane, with the widest rails pins your first pane, with the widest rails at the bottom, and a stiff heart rail at the top. Take a three-eight inch bit and bore through the rails at the first post; then, with a small sledge or stone hammer, drive a four or five inch sut spike; then move your back stick inch sut spike; then move your back stick with pins beside the next post forward—Again place your rails for the next panel and spike them in like manner, and so on. The spike where the spike passes through into the post, is about two inches thick, that is, one inch through each rail.

This kind is the cheapest and heat farm fence I have ever seen. It is very durable and substantial; not subject to be blown down by the wind or to saven or sax. It is unby the wind, or to careen or sag. It is unlike what is commonly known as a post and rail fence, where the posts are morticed; the rail fence, where the posts are morticed; the posts being nearly square have better beargings. In making this fence, there is a great saving of thaber, for it requires only eight rails to the rod to make a five rail fence," it whereas, in making the "worm fence," it takes twenty; and it will not last so long, because where the rails cross seach other they because where the rails cross each other they soon decay. Again, it requires less timber for a bar than for a good sized rail. My opinion is, that rails spiked on to posts in the manner above described with the heart of the rail invariably up, will lest at least one-third longer than those laid up in a crooked fence. With my present experience and knowledge of this kind of post and rail fence, I would have no other in this section of the country of this kind of post and rail fedge, I would have no other in this section of the country; as a farm fence, except perhaps around the house. It takes a very little, if any more timber, for there is no loss for slabs; and to say the least, is more substantial, and I believe the terms of the and rails.

say the least, is more substantial, and I be-lieved to be a great saving of time and nails. The expense for spikes will not, I should think, exceed two and a half to three cents a rod. There are other considerations why SAMURL W. BROCKS DORTRAIT AND LANDSCAPE PAINT-ers. Studio, Corner of East Water and Wiscon-tin Etruct, over van Uctris. a rod. There are other considerations why this kind of fence is cheaper and preferable, such as hauling logs to mill, &c.; but I will not say more at present, for my article is much longer than I intended.

THE SENTINEL.

A HOME TO REST IN. BY HENRY MORFORD.

The world, dear John, as the old folks told us, is a world of trouble and care. Many a cloud of grid will enfold us. And the sunshine of joy is but rare. But there's something yet to be bright and blest in, No matter how humble the lot; The world shif gives us a home to rest in, In holiest, happiest spot. Sweet home! dear home! on the northern heather,
On the sunniest southern plain;
The Lapland but in its whirty weather,
The tent of the Indian main;
He is gorgeous whith that our temple is drest in,
He it poor and of little worth,
Oh, home! OUR home—a home to rest in—
Is the dearest thing on earth.

But time, dear John, is using us badly,
Our homes cromble day by day,
And we're laying our dear ones, swittly and sadly,
In the dust of the valley away.
There's a death-robe soon for us both to be drest in,
A place for us under the sod:
Be Heaven at last the home we shall rest in—
The rest of the people of God!

[Written expressly for the Daily Sentinel.] TWENTY STEPS

TO ONE WOMAN'S HEART. [CONTINUED.] "How does Chris, propose to receive us?" asked Stansbury, "with flying colors?" "His landlady will prepare a gorgeous supper. I told him he must be very careful in Now, I'll run over home; be at Green-ways precisely at seven—au revoir!" with which Clinton hurried abruptly down Astor Phone.

Stansbury was induced shortly afterwards to enter the bazzar of a factitious Turk, where his companion purchased some cheercots, and while they stood there smoking, a friend en-tered and was introduced by him to Stans-bury, as a Mr. Bragg. Mr. Bragg was dres-ed in a blue surtout and brass buttons, with outy, as a Mr. Brage. Mr. Brage was citested in a blue surtout and brass buttons, with plaid pantaleons and varnished boots. He wore a profusion of jewelry, and his good humored fane was ornamented by the usual forms of hirsuit appendage under his chin, and on his lip a small black tute, also hanging just below the centre of his nether lip, as we always see it with dramatic folks.

"Mr. Stansbury, I am happy to meet you," he said, and them calling his friend on one side they held a little private conversation, the substance of which was:

"What have you hearned?"

"I have pumped this fellow dry, but he knows nothing of the girl. His party are going on a spree to night; perhaps I shall get posted better before morning. You may have a couple of the boys within call, for fear I should get spotted."

About an hour later, the party all assembled at Greenway's, and after dressing them. blad at Greenway's, and after dressing them-selves in the Indian costumes set out for the boarding house of Christmas,' led by Jerry Linton, who, of course, was not disguis-ed. The tall, sinewy form of Greenway made a very good Indien, but Clinton, who had painted his face in a diabolical manner, had painted his face in a diabolical manner, resembled rather a fury. On arriving at the boarding-house a short consultation was had, and a course of conduct decided on, when Jerry rung the belt.

A servant opened the door, and Christmas, in a spotless white vest and claret colored coat, stood bowing behind her.

"Here are the braves," said Jerry, entering.
"All right," said Chris. "Bring them

"All right," said them. "Bring them right into the parior."

"Diag ne ugh! Fa ti megda!" said Jerry, and the tall form of Greenway stepped in, followed by the others.

After ranging themselves in the parior and laying off their blankets, Jerry introduced them, commencing with Greenway:

The three remaining Indians were presented in due form and then seated themselves on the oarpet, producing long pipes and cooll commencing to smoke.

"It is customary," said Linton, "on forming the acquaintance of any distinguished person (as they think you are,) to smoke over it in silence. Was not a smoke. person (as they think you are,) to smoke over it in silence. We can now leave them for a few moments. Chris then at Jerry's solicitation conducted him down to the dining room where the dinner had been spread. A very tempting array of cold ham and beef and fruit and vegetables.

"This is all wrong, Chris," said Linton looking over the table with a desperate effort luxuries as these will please our friends, I hope? Bless you no!" he added, as his companion signified that he did suppose so! "They must have raw beef parched corn and whiskey. None of your flummery for Nature's men. Let me fix it! And forth—with the things were all ordered off, and the servant sent to the butcher's for several pounds of meat, which, together with a great bread tray full of partially roasted corn and a demijohn of alcohol took the place of the viands.

'Now let us go up an entertain them.'
But the red men were not in want of entertainment. When Linton arrived in the parlor, he found, to his horror, the lady of the house her three damphiers, and a hursulean lor, he found, to his horror, the lady of the house, her ware daughters, and a hurculean son, occupying the parlor, bestowing no very complimentary passages upon their visitors.

"I say, Chris," shouted the Hercules as the former entered the room, "where did you pick up these vagrants?"

"Allow me to inform you, sir, that these are my quests while here, and any indignity offered to them will be met by their entertainer." Whereupon the three daughters administered a very tart reproof to the brother for his impudence, which only made him the more out of humor with the poor fellows on the carpet.

the more out of numor with the poor leftows on the carpet.

The same Clinton who gloried in an introductory of the "Bloody War Horse," here accosted Linton the interpreter:

"What does he say?" asked Chris.

"Really, I am afraid to repeat it," rejoined Linton. But Clinton, not to be outdone, repeated as well as he was able, the masses. peated, as well as he was able, the passage, ooking very severe at the Hercules.
"What is it ?" asked the girls and Chris,

n chorus.
"Well, ladjes and gentlemen, the Bloody War Horse of the Tiogas says he would like to fight the young gentleman there with butcher knives if he will come down in the street. I have told him it was impossible, street. I have told him it was impossible, but he insists on my telling the gentleman. To this the Hercules affected to be heartly pleased, but it was evident that he did not like the shallenge. The Bloody War Horse smoked his pipe calmly for a few moments and then made another speech.

"He wishes to know whether these are your squaws, Chris.?" said Linton.

"Um he gua va to me ki chun tie!" said the Roaring Wolf, an aborignal method of saying he was hungry, and to which had already awakened the most intense feelings of curiosity in all the household.

The daughters went of in advance to peep

"I presume so," was the answer returned; and when the party were ushered into the drawing-room and beheld the provision which had been made, Clinton's astonishment can be easily conceived.
"But I say, Jerry," he whispered, "this is too bad; tell him we can't go it."
"What is the Bloody-War-Horse saying?"

asked Christmas.

"Oh! he wishes me to inform you that the smell of the raw beef kindles the god of hunger within him," rejoined Jerry.

"Well, I am glad of it," responded Chris.

"For it wouldn't stir anything in me—that's TO BE CONTINUED.

They are beautimally banked in funfoll, (lined with paper) to prevent fajure by seeping, and are full weight, while the ordinary ground spices are almost invariably short. We warrant them, in point of strength and richness of flavor.
